Description:

Our first introductory event is all about our new, third cohort of PhD students. While the groups at our two universities’ locations may already know many of their colleagues there, we want to arrange a special day just for the exchange between all our new PhDs. Especially the beginning of the PhD projects is extremely exciting and this event is therefore tailored towards social exchange and the proper introduction to our research training group. The PhDs will get to know each other, will briefly and playfully explain their projects and our speakers will give a talk about the central ideas and principles of the RTG. Our postdocs will guide the PhDs through this day from start to finish.
